

UNENDING CITY OF LONDON

Last summer, I visited London with my parents. It is the capital city of United Kingdom, located in the South East of England on the Thames River. Is one of the largest and most dynamic cities in the world, with a strong international character and a diverse population of more than seven million people. As far as I am concerned, it is a place that everybody should visit at least once in their life, but they will be so amazed, that they will wish to go back.

There are endless places to visit, but what no tourist should miss visiting are The Houses of Parliament and Clock Tower, which is better known as Big Ben, the name of its bell. The fact is that, at first sight, tourists get disappointed as the tower isn't as tall as they had imagined. However, after a while they appreciate its beauty. It is also quite advisable to have a ride in London Eye, especially in the twilight time, when it's possible to contemplate the city and also enjoy a breathtaking sunset. There are many other places which are interesting to visit, namely 10 Downing Street, Tower Bridge, Great Fire, Piccadilly Circus, Covent Garden, Nelson's statue in Trafalgar square, wax museum, Buckingham palace, National Gallery and tens of museums, most of them with free admission. And last, but not the least, rain. London is well known for its wet weather therefore, if you want a piece of advice, wear comfortable footwear, a raincoat and an umbrella.

The conclusion remains the same. London is a perfect binding of the past and the present, a city with so many places to visit that one couldn't find the time to view them all. Samuel Johnson was right when he said that when someone is tired of London he is tired of life.
