

ROME

Some years ago, I visited Rome together with my family. It is located in the central-western portion of the Italian Peninsula, just on the Tiber. Moreover, it is also the capital of the Christian Religion and Italy.

It is a charming, ancient city with many buildings and places of interest such as cathedrals, churches or squares. At first sight, you can notice that it is incredible, you can feel the lively narrow streets and the brightness and perfection of every monument. In spite of this, it is not a noisy or bad smelling place, at all. You can smell a pleasurable smell of pizza at every corner of every street, the dream of any young.

As you go on a tour or just sightseeing the city, it is remarkable to say that its unique and unusual atmosphere makes it a different place.

Regarding to the main landmark, you cannot miss admiring the Colosseum and the Trevi Fountain. They are absolutely breath-taking as a consequence of their huge size. Another monument worth naming is the Pantheon, which is circular, with a portico of large columns.

Finally, I must say that it really deserves being called “The Eternal City”, and there must be for some reason or another.

For more information about the city have a look at <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JjgIl5ZFeXs>

Ivan Colet Iglesias, 2nd Batxillerat A